Russia Presents Problem To U.S. . . .

Nixon Suggests Foreign Collegiate Challenge

GREENCASTLE, IND.—INS—Vice President Richard M. Nixon said recently that Russia's program of mass higher education is "frightening both in its basic philosophy and size."

The vice president made the comment during a speech at De Pauw University where he received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Nixon said that 60 per cent of Soviet college graduates each year are in the natural and physical science fields as compared with approximately 13 per cent in the United States.

Students Graduated

He added that some 53,000 scientific and technical students were graduated in Russia last year and only 38,000 in this country.

He argued that increased financing of financially embarrassed private colleges and universities was essential to augment the number of technical graduates in the United States.

Direct Federal ail to these institutions, he contended, was both unlikely and in many respects what he termed undesirable.

He said that when the federal financial situation permits a reduction in taxes, serious consideration should be given to allow tuition and fees of both public and private institutions to be treated as tax deductions.

Source Needed

"A major new source of endowment income for private institutions must come from corporations and other business enterprises who are competing for the graduates colleges are producing."

The vice president, maintaining that the Russians are intent on controlling the minds of men, declared that "this challenge cannot be met solely with technological developments or weapons or sheer good will but it must be met with ideas."

Nixon called for colleges to provide "potential leaders who have the character and desire for service."

Iran Officials Visit BYU Campus While Touring Four Universities

Brigham Young University was one of four American universities visited last week by Iranian officials seeking information on the latest methods of teacher training.

The visitors were Dr. Khanbaba Bayani, director of National Teachers College in Teheran, and his interpreter, Mahmood Taba-tabai, a student of economics at Columbia University for four years.

Other schools visited by the pair are Columbia University, University of California at Berkeley, and University of California at Los Angeles.

Dr. Bayani, who also is a member of the Iranian senate and a member of the Higher Council on Education, the top policy-making body on education in Iran, said the country is currently pressing a strong movement for teacher training in order to overcome illiteracy.

This program is sponsored by the crown. The teacher college movement in Iran is only 25 years old, he said, and the progressive methods he observed at BYU will greatly assist his country to speed up and improve the program.

New Exhibit Features Student Art

Designers Say Sew With Silk

SAN FRANCISCO — (INS)—The silk worm is healthier, busier and from the beauty of his latest efforts, apparently happier than ever before in his 2000-year career.

A preview of his work at San Francisco's Japan Trade Center offered new spring silk fabrics for the designer, the decorator or the woman who stitches up her own Sunday frock.

Japan silk worms are on the double shift with reproduction twice annually these days, said Genzo Maezawa, executive director of the Trade Center.

Organdies Displayed

Organdies, brocades, taffetas, shantungs, prints and flat crepes were displayed. Now woven in 36 to 48 inch widths for the American market, the fabrics retail at $3 to $7.50 per yard.

Printed satin stripe organdy, suggested for a swirling skirted formal, was in summer black with pink and blue nosegays scattered over the shiny stripes.

A cocktail costume could be fashioned from the twilight gray taffeta brightened with sapphire blue sunburst brocade.

White Outlined

Tiny prints, one of hieroglyphic squares drawn in black on an egg shell background and another inspired by cherry blossoms softened the brilliant red with gray branches printed on black.

Giant coral peonies blazed across a width of Fuji silk print. A shantung wax print in navy with staggered bamboo shoots outlined in white, yard-dyed silks in Renoir pastels, a Jacquard shantung with pine needles in shiny gray and black on a field of dull gray, and ornate hand-painted gold brocades were among the designs displayed.

HALF OF WHAT?

By Mrs. Fisher Smith

I hope everyone is not as confused as I am these days about so called half price sales on Diamond Rings. Of course anyone has the right to mark their own merchandise any price they want, and we must agree everyone has to make a profit to stay in business. So if money can be made on any commodity by selling it at half price, then we must assume the price too high to begin with.

We give substantial discounts to students at all times, but to sell at half price we would lose money because of our law mark up to begin with. So all we can say is, Regerdless of Half Off Sales—(Half of What?) We guarantee to meet or beat any price in town on Diamonds of all kinds. Please won't you come and compare—See for yourself.

The 12 victories mark the longest winning streak since 1953.

Meanwhile, Milwaukee swiped a double victory from St. Louis to keep tied for first place with Cincinnati.

In the American League, home runs by Larry Doby and Walt Dropo aided the White Sox in squeezing by the Detroit Tigers, 5-4 and enabling them to maintain their half game margin over the New York Yankees.

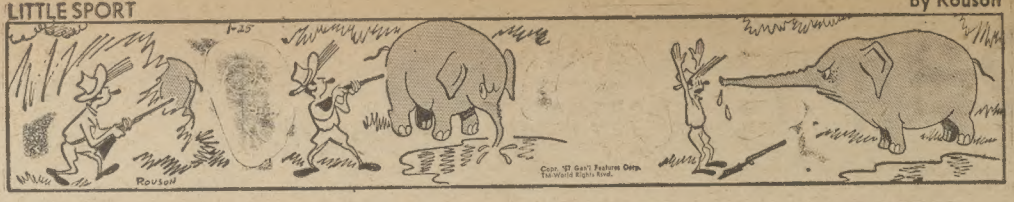
LITTLE SPORT By Rouson



Jerry's Jargon

by Jerry Cunningham

Who can remember when we've had mungier spring weather? Probably the finest sports program ever scheduled at BYU for this time of year has been thoroughly baptized—immersed at that.

The Cougars' "lost weekend" at Logan was almost the coup de grace. Golf, tennis, baseball doubleheader and track were listed on the agenda. Only the golfers and baseball men could cope with the rain. One of the drenched golfers put in, "Yea, we got the match in all right, but we had to put on our lifesavers to survive the sixth hole."

Apparently the Aggies proved to be the better muddlers. Hardly anyone expected the Farmers to beat BYU's Skyline golf champs, even though half the Cougar linksters were playing in Colorado.

Baseball coach Jay Van Noy and his team were bitterly disappointed over their twin loss to the Aggies.

In the first game, with Utah State holding a two-run lead, BYU was batting in the top of the sixth with one on and two out when the sky opened up and unloaded.

Five hours later and 20 degrees cooler, the scene shifted to the night game. Shall we blame BYU's inability to hit in the second encounter on the lights? We think not because the Cougars haven't exactly been knocking the cover off the ball all year, although they have had their good moments.

JACK CRAVENS

Jack Cravens' fastball pitching is much more effective in warm weather. Cold as it was, Cravens pitched creditably. He had allowed only two runs in the first seven innings.

In the fateful eighth he helped set up his own demise with walks. Confronted with getting the ball over the plate at all costs, the big righthander grooved one that was hit on the nose and won the game for the Utags.

So now Van Noy's baseball club, which is materially as good as any team in the Western Division, has its back against the wall. About the best BYU can hope for is a first-place tie. Should the Aggies and Utes split and the Cougars win the remainder of their four home games, the circuit would end in a three-way tie for first among Utah's three universities.

True, it's not likely to happen just that way, but it could. We look for the Brighams to bounce back and take two from Montana and Utah State.

Rain Disrupts BYU's Spring Sports Schedule

Causing considerable trouble to Brigham Young University sports program are the late April and early May showers.

The doubleheader in baseball against Utah State University, which was originally scheduled for April 18, has been tentatively rescheduled for May 21.

BYU will host the Montana Grizzlies in a doubleheader Friday at 1 p. m.

Owing to the heavy precipitation at Logan last weekend, the tennis matches were postponed until May 23. This will be the day before the Conference meet at Logan, May 24-25.

The track meet at Logan was also postponed because of rain and is rescheduled for Tuesday. In case of rain the meet will be held May 22 enroute to the Conference meet at Missoula.

Many records are in danger as the time for the Western Division Track Meet draws near. BYU will play host to the other members of the division Saturday.

Interested fans will fill the stadium for their last view this season of the Cougar trackmen in action.

Coach Buck Dixon split the golf team and sent half to Logan to compete against the Aggies, but they returned home with their first loss of the season.
